

Helena Bjöersdorff Rydqvist
AnnBrith Eliasson Labraaten
Marianne Erlandsson

More Contact 3

Food

Just to survive, people everywhere could eat the same food.

But people of different backgrounds eat very differently.

The ways in which food is prepared, preserved, cut up and cooked vary.

The customs followed when serving food and the use of utensils also differ.

Fish and chips - a very English dish

survive - överleva

backgrounds - bakgrund

prepared - tillagad

preserved - bevarad, konserverad

customs - seder

utensils - redskap

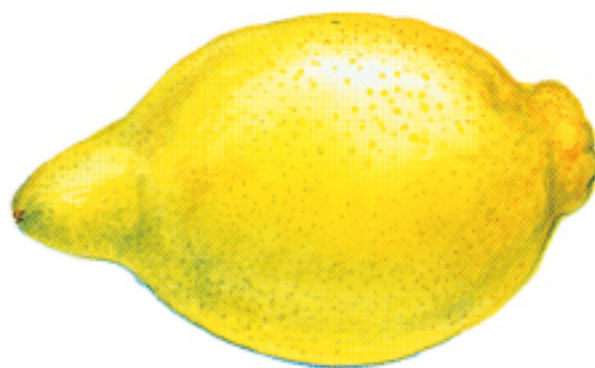

dish - rätt

Exercise

What are they called?

After August 20, 1961 citizens of West Berlin were no longer allowed to enter East Berlin.

The wall was made up of concrete segments with a height of 4 metres. At the "eastern" side there was an illuminated security area (also called death area). Refugees who entered that area were shot without warning.

There were watchdogs and watchtowers and a second wall.

The first wall

concrete - betong

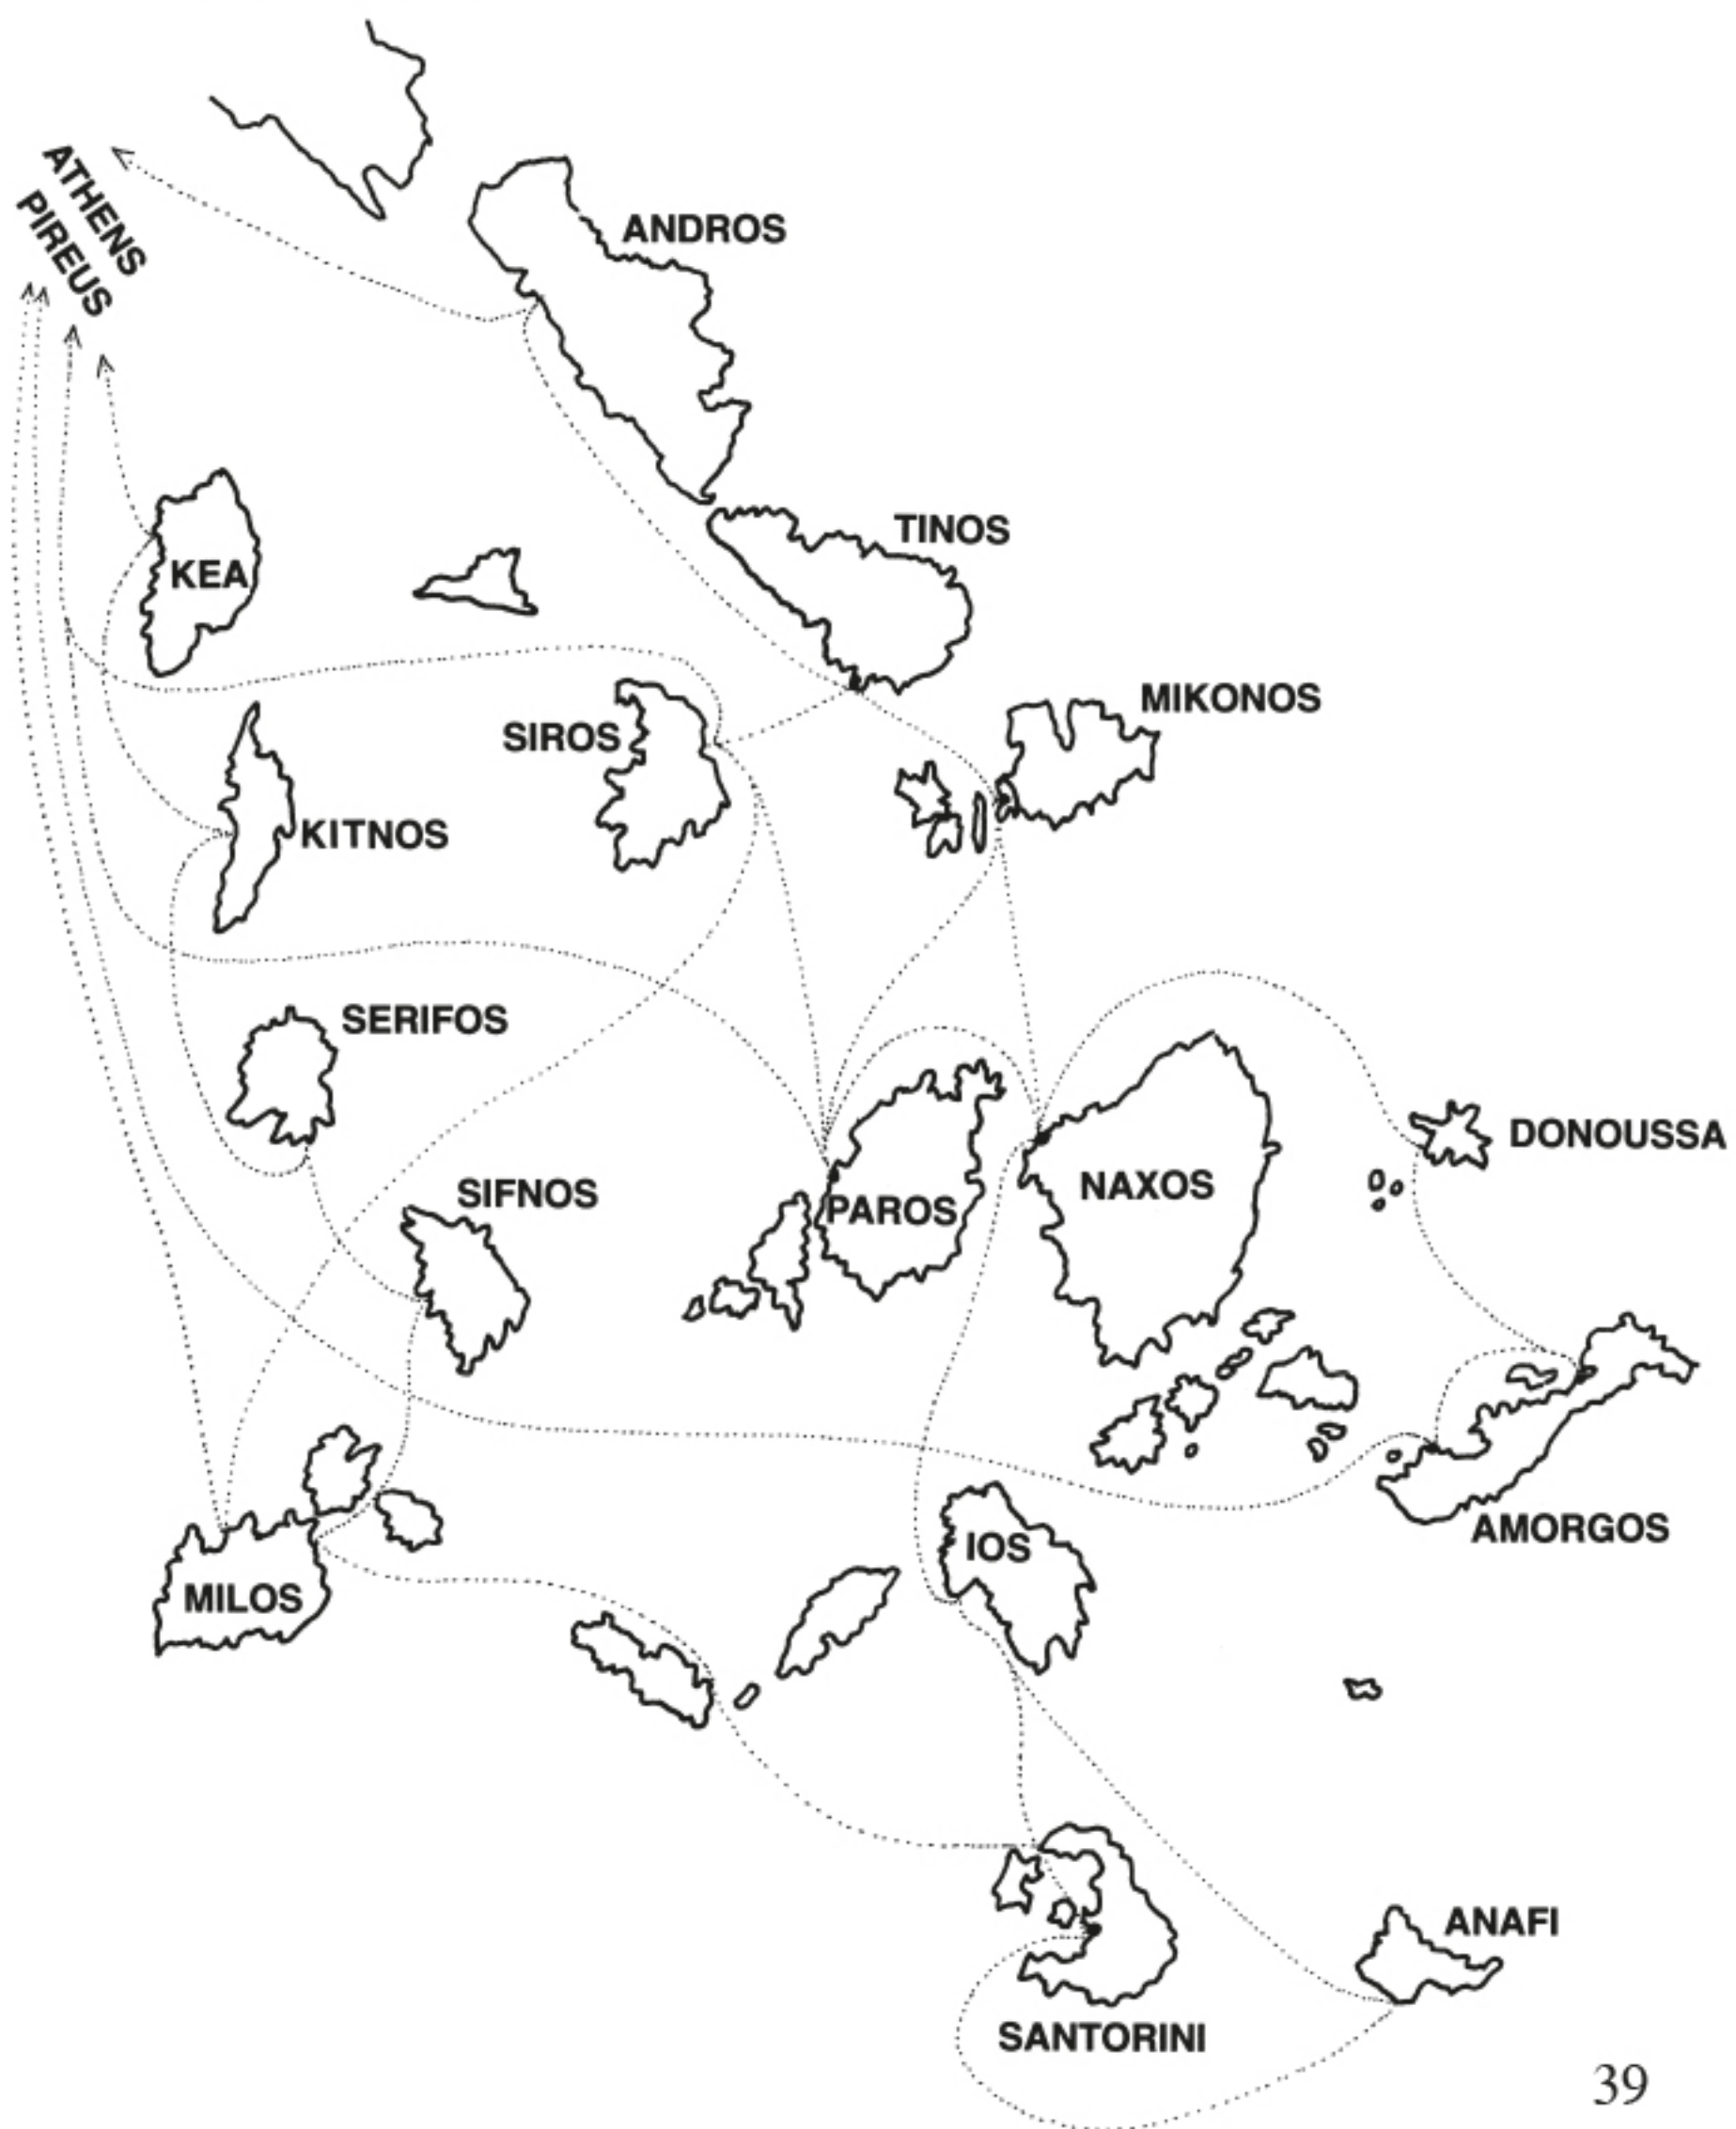

illuminated - belyst

security area - säkerhetszon

watchdogs - vakthundar

watchtowers - vaktorn

Map of the Cyclades

In England there are lots of places like this where you can have a cup of tea.

Chris loves tea.

Black tea is the most popular variety in the USA and Europe.

In India, chai, a blend of tea, milk and spices is available at every roadside stall.

The Chinese and Japanese prefer green tea.

Tea accounts for 43 per cent of the drinks we consume every day.

About 65 per cent of our tea is now imported from Africa.

Three quarters of all the tea we drink is made with a tea bag in a mug.

Americans prefer drinking their tea au naturel or with a slice of lemon.

In the UK most drinkers add milk.

variety - variant

blend - blandning

spices - kryddor

roadside stall - trottoarstånd

accounts - står för

three quarters - tre fjärdedelar

slice - skiva

lemon - citron