

STAY IN CONTACT

Helena Bjöersdorff Rydqvist
AnnBrith Eliasson Labraaten
Marianne Erlandsson

Animals

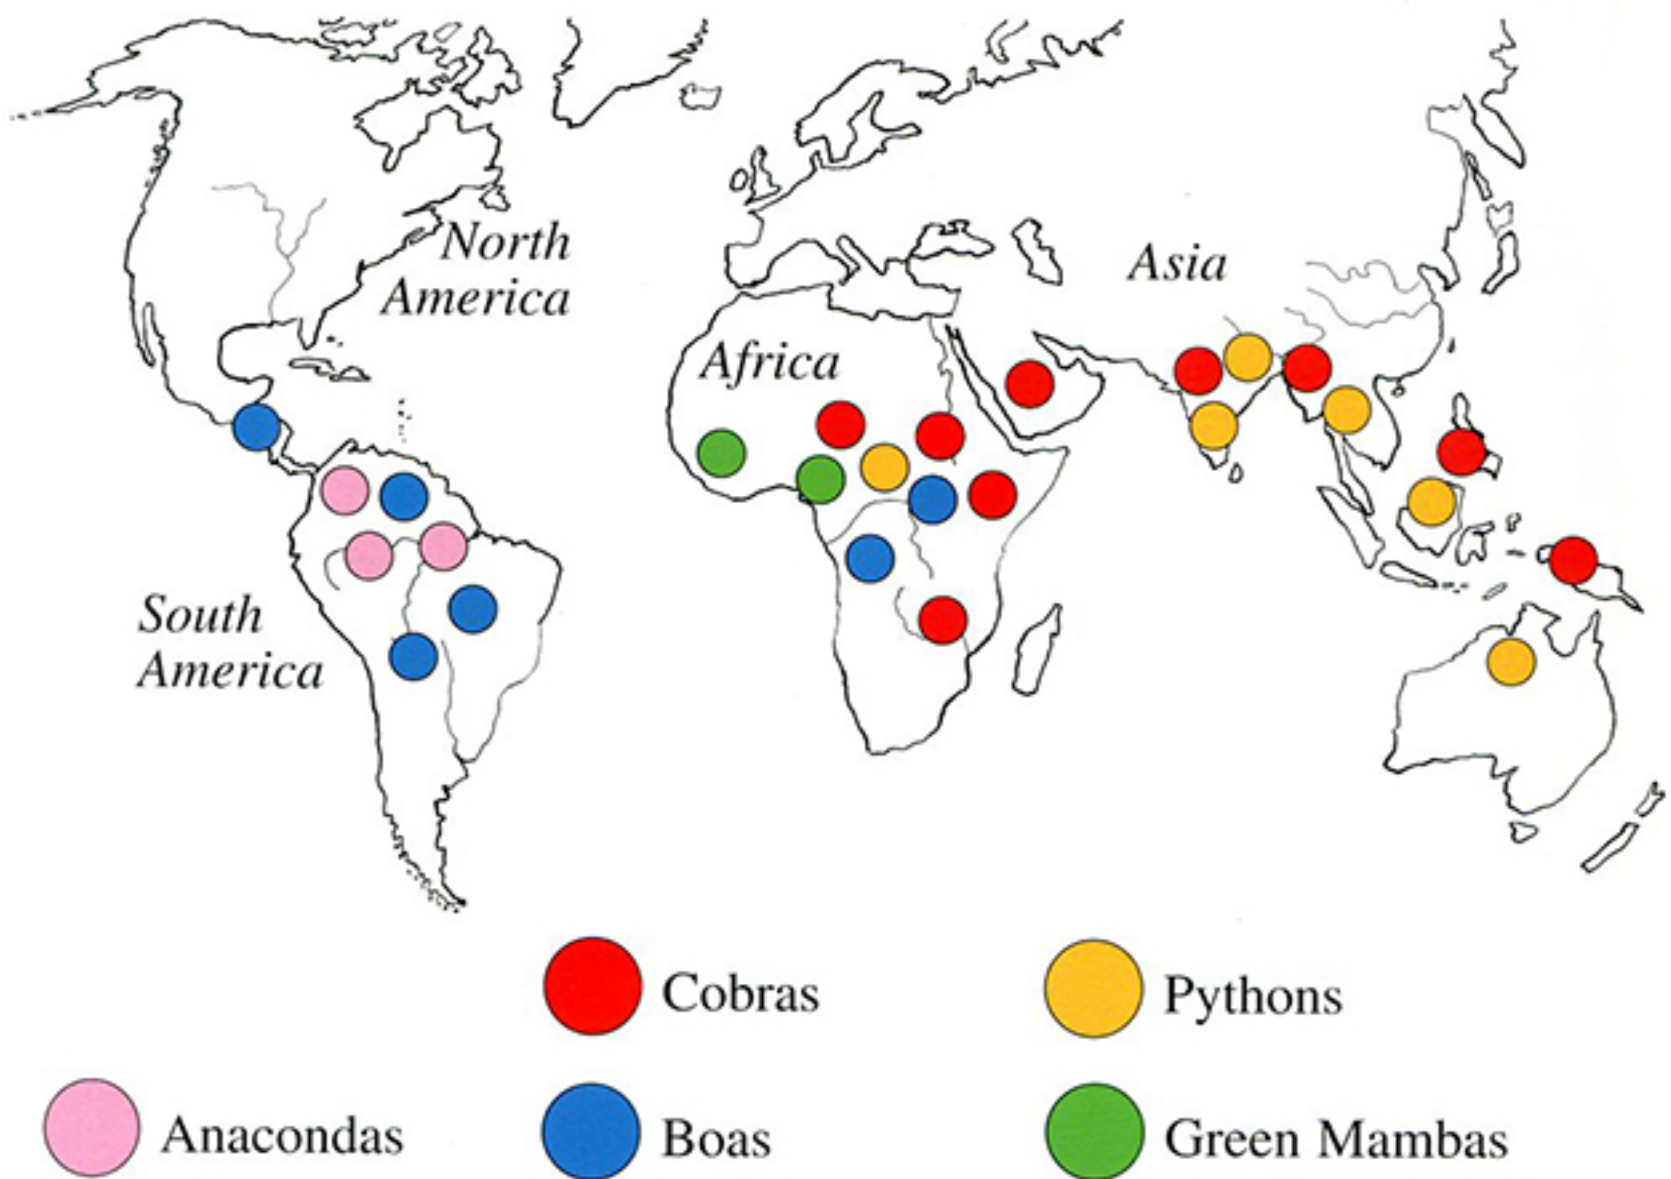

A Python.

The Dangerous Green Mamba.

Where do these snakes live?

The Wolf

Wolves have been very scarce in Sweden since the 1940's.

In the winter of 1979 - 80 there was only one officially known wolf left in Sweden.

In 1982 a male and a female wolf were tracked. They were not together in the winter but obviously met later. In the spring of 1983 a litter of 6 pups was born in northern Värmland.

Today experts assert that it's necessary to have a wolf population of 500 wolves to ensure their survival in the short term.

The wolf is a gregarious animal and a wolf pack consists of from ten to fifteen wolves.

scarce – sällsynt

tracked – spårad

assert – påstår

obviously – tydligt, uppenbart litter – kull

ensure – säkra

pups – valpar

gregarious – som lever i flock

wolf pack – vargflock

Questions you may have about feeding and caring for a mouse.

Q: What kind of food do mice need?

A: Mice will eat just about anything.

Any kind of seed is good. Give them bread, pancakes, pasta, potatoes, vegetables and so on.

No pizza, sweets or junk food.

Q: How much food do mice need?

A: As much as they can eat. Always feed them before the feeding bowl gets empty.

They eat a lot more than you might think judging by their size.

Above: A dance mouse.

*To the left:
A desert mouse.*

caring for – ta hand om

seeds – frön

junk food – skräpmat

feeding bowl – matskål empty – tom

judging by – att döma av

Crossword

