Professions

Work at luncheonettes and catering services is easier to plan. It's usually very crowded and hot in restaurant kitchens.

The most common occupational disorders are cuts, back problems and stress symptoms.

Every week Jesper makes a menu and orders the necessary raw materials. He's learnt approximately how much food will be needed.

If there is food left over at the end of the week he minces the meat and freezes it. He makes fish soup from the left over fish.

In the old days being a chef was a man's job, but now more and more girls are learning to become chefs.

Sara works at a pet clinic in a big animal hospital.
Her most usual patients are dogs and cats.
But rabbits, guinea pigs and birds need help too.

At the animal hospital there is advanced equipment,
like an X-ray machine to help veterinaries make correct diagnoses.

Pets often get just as good medical care
as people do.

At the beginning of each shift the team has to inspect the fire fighting vehicles and equipment.

Everything has to work perfectly. When they get an alarm they have 90 seconds to get ready and leave.

There are many different causes of fires. The most common is when someone lights a fire on purpose, and the second most common is stoves left on.

In the Rescue Services a lot of time is spent on preventing accidents. Firemen visit schools and businesses to inform on how to prevent various kinds of fires.
